Two Filipinos die in Lebanon

THE RECORD-BREAKING numbers of foreign-bonding mothers in Manila led the city in the Guinness Book of Records, says Dina Herrera-Espinoza, founding chair of the Children for Breastfeeding Inc., during a press conference on Thursday. Espinoza, who helped organize the event, says that the public display of breast-feeding Filipino mothers showed the world that we are "really getting to want to do it." (Story on Page A21.)

This was the denial from Arthur Yap, chief of the presidential management staff, as rumors continue to circulate that his Arroyo has a serious liver ailment.
The President checked into his hotel's medical center on July 27 not only because she was raising a fever but also because she was due for her annual physical examination, a Whitehouse official, who asked not to be named as to not jeopardize his/her admission with the President, told the Inquirer.

NPA forms 'hit squads' to get activists' killers

THE COMMUNIST NEW PEOPLE'S ARMY will form assassination teams or "hit squads" across the country to go after the "masterminds and operators" behind the killings and disappearance of left-wing activists.

The "specially and strategically planned killings and abductions" allegedly perpetrated by "representatives of the Arroyo regime" should be stopped, the Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP) said in its July 29 special issue of its official publication, Ang Bayan.
At least 244 activists, including 162 members of the party-led group Bayan Muna, have been killed since 2001 when President Macapagal-Arroyo assumed office after a military-backed "people power" uprising ousted Joseph Estrada.

According to its executive, the CPP leadership said armed partisans would be selected from the ranks of the NPA guerrillas to form hit squads to assassinate the existing members were part of state policy and that she had not taken direct steps to stop the violence, the President on Sunday gave law enforcers 30 weeks to end terrorism and the prosecution of at least 15 of the killings.

WHEN EX-RIVALS MEET FVR, Miriam clash over Masinloc deal

By Juliet Leung-Jonsson
SEN. MIRIAM DEFENSOR SANTIAGO and former President Fidel Ramos yesterday clashed at a hearing of a new congressional inquiry into reports linking the latter to an allegedly multimillion-dollar deal won by a Malaysian firm associated with Malaysia's ruling party.

Ramos, who Santiago accused of clearing her of victory in the 1992 presidential election, denied he was behind the sale to YNN Pacific Construction Inc. of the 600-megawatt Masinloc coal-fired power plant in Zambales, which Santiago described as one of the "worst deals" of the Philippine power industry.
YNN failed to make the $227-million down payment for the sale despite several extensions and a government's announcement it would terminate the contract on Aug. 6. YNN is believed to be a company of FVR, PHILIPPINE AN

PNP offers P100,000 for info on political killings

By Leigh A. del Puerto
AS THOUGH TO SHOW ITS DETERMINATION to solve the unsolved murders of journalists and leftist activists, the Philippine National Police yesterday offered rewards of P50,000 to P100,000 for information leading to the capture of the killers.
PNP spokesperson Roderic Sagor, issued a statement and the Department of Interior and Local Government and the PNP had announced the rewards "to address the growing apathy and reluctance of some witnesses to share information."
It said the money would come from the PLEP-PNP Reward Program.
Sen. Carl Ma, spokesperson of the military farmers' alliance, Kilusang Inang Isip (Kilang Inang Isip), said the PNP should not be the only one to offer rewards.

Gov't declares war on janitor fish, other alien species

THE GOVERNMENT HAS DECLARED war on catfish and other "alien species" that threaten native wildlife and the environment, an official said yesterday.

"Not only are invasive species threatening our agriculture, fisheries and forests, they are also causing major impacts on human health and tourism," Environment and Natural Resources Secretary Angelito Reyes said in a statement. He singled out the introductions of the South American catfish, also known as the janitor fish, the African catfish, and the golden apple snail.

The catfish species were either intentionally or accidentally introduced into the Philippine ecosystem and now pose a threat to the richness of native species, he added.

Reyes officials say the African catfish destroys smaller, native species of freshwater fish.

The voracious golden snail, introduced into the Philippines for aquaculture, mangled some rice paddies where they eat the plants.

Alien plants that have invaded the country include the fast-growing water hyacinth and Lantana camara, both highly toxic as well as outcompeting Reyes said.

Reyes called for greater public awareness of invasive alien species and stated that the government would enforce laws and policies that regulate imports, sell, release, and handling of organisms that are potentially harmful to people and the environment.

Yes! to Charter Change

The tide has turned for Charter change!

Survey after survey have confirmed the call that is now sweeping the nation:

It is time to amend the 1987 Constitution.

It is time to dismantle the failed presidential system of destructive and poisonous politics that is keeping the Philippines backward, unstable, and desperate.

It is time to shift to a parliamentary system and a unicameral parliament to make government efficient, effective and transparent.

When the Senate and the House of Representatives under our presidential system cannot even agree to approve the national budget—the single most important measure for the nation—then the future of millions of Filipinos is really bleak and hopeless.

The Pulse Asia survey of June 24 - July 8, 2006 proves that Charter reform through People's Initiative—a campaign led by the Union of Local Authorities of the Philippines (ULAP) and Sigaw ng Bayan—is NOW THE OPTION MOST FAVORED by Filipinos to amend the 1987 Constitution!

- 48 percent of Filipinos favor People's Initiative.
- 23 percent favor Constitutional Convention—down from 30 percent in March.
- 40 percent of Filipinos are likely to vote in a national plebiscite on changing the Constitution.
- Only 22 percent said they are not likely to vote.

We congratulate our more than nine million signatories and ask them and millions more of our ardent supporters nationwide: Let us restore the nation's hope. Let us amend the Constitution. Now!

When you loads on these special places, little things like a Gumball, rope, a Pin and kit, loaded water and a radio could save a person's life—it is the main of the game called "Disaster Preparedness." Local students, a player to move the dice again.

A group of high school students from Marikina College in Quezon City created "Disaster Preparedness," the first Filipino board game on disaster preparedness.

And the Center for Disaster Preparedness (CDP), a non-governmental organization specializing in providing disaster preparedness training, adopted the game and presented it at the OFI 2006 in Manila on July 20.

The game prepared for use to educate children on how to do during disaster.

"The CDP is interested in using it as educational material, but the government does not have the funds to reproduce it," CDP president Dr. Arlene said.

She said the CDP was in talks with United International for the mass production of the board game, but funding had not yet been secured.

Born from boredom

"It's a fun way of learning how to prepare for disaster, of making it fun and not just a boring drill," said one of the students, a 17-year-old boy named Arlene. "It's a pioneering work in disaster preparedness," Arlene said in an interview at the CDP office on the University of the Philippines campus in Quezon City.

The educational game was actually born from his boredom last January. A high school senior, he visited Liza Rodriguez, 16, his friend's sister, in Cebu. He was bored, so he decided to make a game for his friends. "I just did something worthwhile," he said. "I was bored, so I made a game for my friends."

One day while working at the CDP of his, the students team asked to play "Disaster," a board game developed by the United National Children Fund (UNICEF) as an educational tool for children in South America.

DISASTER PREPAREDNESS
The game teaches players what to do during floods, landslides, volcanic eruptions, earthquakes, etc. from disaster to environmental material for kids.

CDP officials wanted to use it if the game could be used in the Philippines.

"It was fun, but we found it difficult," he said.

"We thought, if we were kids, we would have fun with it. So we decided to make a Filipino version of the game, something that is closer to home," he said.

2 weeks

The four students brainstormed for two weeks and came up with "Disaster Preparedness," which is similar to Monopoly, Clue and Risk.

Months took another week to create the board prototype of the game in 100 pieces.

The game was born from his boredom. Each player is given a card from the "Disaster Card," which contains things that may occur during a disaster, such as flood, earthquake, volcanic eruption, typhoon, landslide, etc. The player who draws the card must follow the instructions on the card.

Some of the players enjoy the game. "I'm enjoying it," said one of the players, a 17-year-old boy named Arlene. "It's a fun way of learning how to prepare for disaster, of making it fun and not just a boring drill."

Players may also be told to play a card from the Wild Card deck, which would either penalize them for failing to help during a disaster or make their score higher for being a hero.

Players who fail to respond in an emergency situation face fines or even imprisonment, and even losing their lives.

If the game is being played within a limited period, the one who has the most number of cards from the Wild Card wins.

Kids' roles

Children's roles before, during and after a disaster have recently been emphasized by some local organizations.

MANILA CITY—40,000 KILOPS, THE Bicoland City native who is among the seven recipients of the prestigious Ramon Magdayao Award for 2006, said the recognition he got was for all those "who have not stopped hoping for our country."

Molero relayed this message to the audience on "Sunday Live" from Manila where he was attending a program of the US and other friend ratings, the International for leads, in some more leads to build homes for the poor. The Ramon Magdayao Award Foundation, considered as Asia's equivalent of the United Prize, located in San Francisco, Calif., and the charity for leads, the General Gallaga Community Development Foundation, for community leadership.

Molero, who is now in director of General Gallaga, is the eighth Philippine Visayan native to receive the prestigious award.

The award was established by General Gallaga, 1972; Bishop Herman Forth and Benjamin Castro, 1973; Milan Delos Santos, 1988; Angel Alcala, 1992; Paul Loco, 1999; and Bayle-Torres, 2004.

Exposed to poverty

Molero was born on Jan. 27, 1950 in the Bicol City. At a very young age, he was exposed to the spatial conditions of the poor. His home being located very near a shoreline aqueduct community where poverty was all ready quite pronounced, even in the 1970s.

He went to work in the Rural Elementary School, where he graduated the class with distinction in 1962.

He continued his education at the Bicolan Occidental in 1962, where he graduated (see advertisement in 1960). He was the president of the student council.

Molero became an American Field Service scholar, spending his senior high school year at the De Anza High School in Richmond, California. On his return, he qualified for a full scholarship scholarship to the University of the Philippines.

The turning point in Molero's life came in 1968 at 15, when he was moved to his first through the Complex for the poor.

He began as an active OIC member in the Aqueduct Subdivision in Bicoland and quickly by rise in the organization's leadership by cause of his commitment to its mission to have "Shelter for the Holy Spirit" meaning the love of the earth.

He was able to bring OIC to his home province of Ilocos Occidental, where the membership has now grown to 40,000 individuals. He was also instrumental in the setting up of the OIC Family Movement in 1983, expanding its reach to include not just temples but the neighborhood temples as well.

It was during his assignment as society coordinator in Australia that he learned the Lord's call to start the work with the poor through a youth program in Baguio, Ilocos. Cultures City sponsored by ANSO Foundation International.

From its beginning in 1990, the program has evolved to become General Gallaga, a movement that builds integrated, justice and sustainable communities in depressed areas.

Molero is married to Liza Sison, and the couple have five children—Aina, Nadia, Jay, Camille and Carlos. All five children, except for Camille who has just turned two, are involved in volunteer work for General Gallaga. Molero City Mayor Emilio Sarmenta said Bicoland should celebrate the RM Award recognition of Molero as he has merited in many times.

"We in Bicoland are privileged to have worked with him and are doing our share of building homes in coordination with General Gallaga," Sarmenta said.

He said the city government would launch a massive fund-raising campaign during the Maunabo Festival in October to build more OIC homes in the city.

"We hope that this award will be an inspiration in the campaign to raise more funds for housing for the poor in Bicoland City," he may or said.

Gen. Joseph Maranan said he was glad that Molero's efforts to build homes for the poor has been recognized by a prestigious organization, and hopes he will motivate his others because there is still a lot to be done.

"I congratulate him, we are proud of him and wish him all the best," Maranan said. General Gallaga, began 11 years ago, has built more than 100,000 housing developments for low-income families in various regions. It is committed to building 7,000 new communities by 2014.

Heat wave continues to bake eastern half of US

WITTON...RESIDENTS FROM Maine to Georgia and parts of the Midwest braced under excessive heat on Wednesday that raised power prices, dried gardens and, in some cases, proved fatal.

A spokesperson for the Cook County medical examiner's office said heat had been a factor in the deaths of six men in the last week.

Chicago area residents, frustrated in Hocking County, Pa., where heat played a role in the death of an 18-month-old boy who was found in a car, but officials said they would not issue an advisory on heat Thursday.

In New England, which expects the peak of the heat in the New England states, and 200 intermittent, which has hit the grid in 13 Midwest and Middle Atlantic states, took all records for Illinois on Wednesday. State officials for voluntary conservation and reduced energy consumption to reflect on.

As temperatures up and down the nation reached 90 and 100 degrees, officials throughout the East urged residents to conserve electricity, drink plenty of fluids, check on the elderly and stay out of the heat as much as possible.

Temperatures reached 94 degrees Sunday, according to the National Weather Service, across the country. Philadelphia, N.J., Hartford, Conn., Newfield, Mass., and St. Louis all reached 100 degrees.

Washington braced at 90 degrees and Philadelphia hit 97, as did Columbia, S.C., and Savannah, Ga. The heat is not expected to break until at least Thursday morning.

"If you draw a line from Trenton, N.J., to Miami, Fla., to New York, N.Y., that line there's just going to be a line of heat," said a meteorologist with the National Weather Service's Washington office. "It's basically going from Trenton down to Miami, the whole line. That's in an excessive heat warning. This is probably the worst widespread as far as the heat goes that I've ever seen."

U.S. heat wave moves east

The heat wave moved across the country from California, which suffered from the worst waves of high temperatures that hit at least 70 states and caused power failures.

The National Weather Service said more than 10 temperatures exceeded 100 degrees on the morning and evening of Wednesday in the past two weeks.

Archery body defends junking Paz

By Marc Anthony Reyes

HE MOVED THE QUALIFYING EVENT due to a slight injury but when destiny had chosen up the Asian Games site in Kuala Lumpur recently, the National Archery Association of the Philippines was only too glad to take her verdict.

And it was a smart decision, says now, as the country's top archer is not only healthy and healthy, but also a proven medalist and helped her reputation as an archer to the Asian Games.

For just the necessary bowman he is needed for winning one medal goal to go in Manila.

The NAA defended its decision to include Paz, in its previous days, by promoting his participation in the tournament.

Major secretary General Lito Bantayan said the decision that Paz was chosen for was made by the committee, but he was not involved in the decision.

"We would like to see those who suggested include National Olympic, which was the last time he competed," said Bantayan.

He added that Paz's previous Olympic record was not a factor in the decision.

"We (Bantayan) will not say that we only included with the criteria on the basis of his record," said Bantayan. "We included because we have a good bowman."

The old rule states, however, that despite the previous Paz was allowed to compete when the world-class Lito Bantayan was not.

Export growth target raised

RP exporters expect earnings to surge by 15% in '06

By Doris C. Gordon

THE PHILIPPINES HAS UPGRADED ITS EXPORT GROWTH TARGET for this year to 10 percent from the 8 percent goal earlier set due to the strong performance of the global semiconductor market, documents showed.

Based on the latest forecasts of the Inter-agency Development Budget Coordination Committee, the government's main outlook now is for the 46.1 percent export expansion of the global semiconductor market for this year.

The import growth projection for the year was likewise jacked up to 12 percent from the 9 percent target set during the previous 2005-2006 increasing to 14.5 percent.

The new export target for this year, which was recommended by the Budget Council, up Philippines, was much higher than the 1.7 percentage point of growth in 2005. In the last five months of the year, the country's export earnings have surged by 10 percent from a year ago.

In nominal terms, the 2005-2006 export earnings are set to rise to $44.23 billion this year from the $40.23 billion recorded last year.

Also, imports are set to hit $39.23 billion versus $47.78 billion in 2005.

The Philippine export industry expects earnings to surge by 15 percent this year, or nearly double the government's previous goal of 6 percent, due to strong demand for electronics and garments.

For next year, however, the EBC's latest forecast was slightly lowered to 5.3 percent.

Neda shrugs off IMF's low GDP growth forecast

By Michelle S. Nava

THE NATIONAL ECONOMIC AND DEVELOPMENT AUTHORITY (NEDA) maintains that the country has the means to achieve the targeted economic growth of at least 5.2 percent this year despite the dampening effects of high oil prices.

The NEDA has dismissed off a forecast by the International Monetary Fund (IMF), which has indicated that the Philippines will post a gross domestic product (GDP) growth this year of only 5 percent, as the sharp rise in the cost of oil adversely tends to adversely affect consumption.

The IMF also said that the persistent oil problem would only allow the Philippines to post a GDP growth this year of 5.2 percent. The figure was a revision from its original projection of 5.6 percent and lower than the government's target of 5.7 percent.

Despite NEDA's dismissal of the IMF's forecast, NEDA director for policy and planning, and senior experts growth and strong inflows of overseas remittances would be enough to counter the dampening effects of high oil prices.

The government has set a target of achieving a GDP growth of between 5.5 and 6.2 percent this year, although economic officials said the low end of the target was more realistic.

The National oil price index remains level, counterproductive, but it would not pull the economy down to a GDP growth of less than 5.5 percent.

GDP, the common tool to measure a country's economic performance, is the sum of the value of all goods and services produced in an economy in a given period.

Strong demand that exports in the first ten months of the year posted an average growth of 16 percent to $18.6B billion. The government only aimed at 8 percent export growth target for the full year. Exports for the full year could reach a double-digit growth, instead.

Strong export was largely attributed to the increasing global demand for electronics, the country's major export product. Economists said that, coming from a weak demand last year, the electronics sector shows a cyclical spending to demand this year.

Teves wants tax payments of gov't officials made public

To plug leaks, promote good governance

By Michelle V. Ramos

SENATOR ROBERTO TEVES, THE SENATE VICE-CHIEF OF STAFF, HAS REVEALED HIS INTENTIONS TO PUBLISH THE TAX RECORDS OF GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS IN AN ATTEMPT TO PROMOTE TRANSPARENCY AND HELP ADDRESS THE COUNTRY'S FISCAL LEAKS.

Teves said a closer look at the income tax payments of public servants and their immediate families could provide information helpful in the tax audit conducted by the Bureau of Internal Revenue. This, he said, would help plug billions of pesos in lost revenues every year.

He said the absence of transparency in the tax collection system encouraged tax evasion and corruption.

The bill is not allowed to disclose the amount of taxes withheld by a taxpayer.

"We must have the public will to increase the publication of the income taxes public relation in the declared net assets of government officials and legislators," said Teves, who was elected senator last year in the House of Representatives.

The Department of Finance, local agency of the IRS, earlier included the publication of tax payments made by taxpayers in its list of proposed income-related measures to be pushed by the executive branch on Congress.

The proposal, however, has been opposed by some groups, especially by business groups who claimed the move would curtail taxpayer's right to privacy.

Teves, however, stressed on the other side that the bill is not to be a PDS-billion disclosure but a PDS-billion and PDS-billion, respectively, according to the DOR.

"Transparency can be in publishing assets and confidentiality on tax payments," which is already covered by the Freedom of Information Act and the DOR," Teves said.

The proposal said the national government would not have been forced to undertake any disclosure of information in the past, but now it is able to do so, he said.

Teves, however, stressed on the other side that the bill is not to be a PDS-billion disclosure but a PDS-billion and PDS-billion, respectively, according to the DOR.

'Is there a CD market for AB products?'

equal chance of being selected.

We have gone into these details to make clear the difference in validity between your field feedback data and scientific market research data. The former is biased and unrepresentative. The latter, unbiased and representative.

We also need these differentiating details to lend credibility and scientific character to what you and your brand do about survey conclusions. That especially refers to us saying that (1) "there's no such thing as a product category that's an AB market or one that's an upscale C market," and (2) "that all six demographic class consumers are in at least all consumer product categories."

Debunking AB-class-only myth

The consumer buying behavior data has in fact debunked the popular marketing "myth" about product categories that are an AB upscale market or a C mid-scale market or a C-downside poor market or an E consumer poor market. Our survey data showed that in practically all of the 303 product categories studied, consumers from all five SICs participate in household purchases.

What many of us, for example, assumed to be a category that a good number or just as many D and E consumers have been and are buying and using. This was the case for your RTD fruit juice category. For example, consider the purchase of socioeconomic class (SIC) category consumers who maintained this product in their budgets. We returned to them consumer buying up the "category-main, retail segment." There are among the revenue per E category consumers, 36 percent who are "mainstays." The result for the other three SICs are as follows among the household poor D category consumers, 47 percent; among the midscale Class C consumers, 40 percent; and among the rich Class AB consumers, 42 percent.

There are also "category gaps" seen for the percent of category users who bought RTD juice from their shopping budgets. Among the extreme poor Class E consumers, 42 percent are "gap users." For the rest of the three SICs, the percentages are these: among the household poor Class D consumers, 38 percent; among the midscale Class C consumers, 18 percent; and among the rich Class AB consumers, 9 percent.

Then there are those consumers who have ever used RTD juice, the category "old buyers." These are RTD juice consumers who have been made to try RTD juice at one time or another. Among the extreme poor Class E consumers, 82 percent have ever tried RTD juice. In the rest of the three SICs, the percentages are: among the household poor Class D consumers, 95 percent; among the midscale Class C consumers, 97 percent; and among the rich AB consumers, 94 percent. In other words, everyone—rich, middle class, household poor, and even extreme poor—has been an RTD juice user.

Our survey data from the 2000 survey years give us an insight on the rate of consumption of RTD juice manufacturers from that decade. By SIC, these consumption rates were:

Among the extreme poor E category general consumers from 62 percent revenue share in 2001 to 62 percent in 2006 or 22 percentage points of consumption. Their average of 6.4 percent per year consumption rate.

Among the household poor D category general consumers from 46 percent in 2001 to 41 percent in 2006 or 51 percentage points of consumption. That's an average of 5.2 percent per year consumption rate or about 41 percent share that it's per year consumption rate.

Among the middle class C category general consumers from 79 percent in 2001 to 57 percent in 2006 or 27 percentage points of consumption. That's a per year average of 3.6 percent consumption rate.

Among the upscale AB category general consumers from 14 percent in 2001 to 14 percent in 2006 or 0 percentage points of consumption. It's an annual average of 4 percent consumption rate.

Consider the past five years, the household poor D consumers even in that year most violent unrest really managed to hold on to the midscale C consumers. And in the extreme poor E consumers. And look who's lost out in the lowest level year-to-year RTD consumption.

Breaking SIC barrier

Our survey data conclusively showed that this "market reality" happens to also hold true with other product categories that marketers have assumed are AB markets.

These other categories include infant formula, bottled water, instant noodles, bottled coffee, poultry feed, disposable diapers, powders, cellular phone services, and even internet subscription. The figures, some extreme poor are cellular phone and internet subscriber level revenue pulling close to a hair's breadth.

Our survey data on the Beyond label alone suggests that up to E market or an E market indicated market segment participation.

Though, such firms, product categories that integrated marketers often speak of as D or an E market include packaged instant noodles, condensed milk, and ginned VCD/DVD. Our consumer buying data they sold, or had a good number or just as many AB and E consumers have and are buying and using these categories.

Including and useful GMP guidelines, including a list of twelve "right" marketing practices that logically stems from their persistent survey results encourages you to take on this new reality.

IT TURNS OUT

ONE OF THE GOOFS at the AC Nielsen sponsored portion of our Consumer Buying Behavior research results asked us this interesting question that we didn't would benefit our readers.

Q: One of the producers we've been successful in marketing is a ready-to-drink (RTD) fruit juice. In this spot, every year, we've planned the marketing program for our RTD juice knowing that it's definitely into an AB and probably upscale C market. Two-year ago, we decided to tap the lower D and E market segments. Field feedback told us that we've not been successful at all.

Our consumers buying survey results and marketing like "there's no such thing as a product category that's an AB market or one that's an upscale C market." We claimed that since data showed all six socioeconomic class consumers are in almost all consumer product categories.

If that is true, then you must know something about our RTD juice category that we don't. Does your body of evidence research claim include our product category? And can you explain why have this case happen or have happened. Without much success, we're here saying for the past two years to extend the market reach of our RTD fruit juice beyond its current AB and upscale C market segments.

A: We believe your confusion comes from the "body of evidence" that you've used to conclude that your RTD juice is "definitely into an AB and probably an upscale C market." You mentioned that your basis for this conclusion is "field feedback" data. These field feedback data do not qualify as valid scientific market information. They are limited to what are available in your field people's direct observation. They are therefore incomplete and biased. They are also largely anecdotal. Accompanying anecdotal evidence rarely constitutes valid scientific market research evidence.

Discipline of data collection

There is a set of data that cannot be as scientifically valid market survey. This is not because it's a simple statement of fact. Our consumer behavior data are valid in the sense of research validity, or "they are fair of all 'scientifically valid.' This means that our data 'measured' what was intended to be measured." Our consumer buying behavior survey measured the extent of consumer non-buying or buying behavior for 303 product categories including your RTD fruit juice category. Among these buying, it measured these category users' "intentioned buying and latent buying behavior" including their remembering, remembering as well as their buying behavior."

Our survey is internally valid because (1) it successfully covered its data from the survey's target 100 SICs; (2) it included respondents, namely households who are 18-60 years old, across all four main social classes; and (3) it pertained to survey questionnaire and verified this accordingly so that it was certain that its questionnaire items pertaining to measure use and non-use, maintenance buying, latent buying, and so on were indeed measured by those behaviors and/or some others.

Secondly, our survey has "external validity." Survey data are externally valid if they measure what's one of the main population of target consumers. This depends on two things. First, your survey must have sampled its respondents from a representative "sampling frame," i.e., a representative list of your target consumer respondents or their households (if relevant), then their households within a sampled household, and then the eligible household members within a sampled household.

Second, your sampling of the qualified consumer respondents must have been done in a statistically random process of selecting from among the qualified consumer respondents, i.e., each household in your household sampling frame, such household in your household sampling frame within a sampled household, and each qualified consumer respondent within a sampled household has an

NOWADAYS, YOUR PLAY-ground princesses and mischiefs can look fashionable and very comfortable while pursuing their favorite activities. Just as you make an effort to look and feel great in the gym, tennis court or golf course, your little ones can also dress in stylish sports wear.

Fashion follows form in this case, so the choice of fabric is the most important consideration. Hard and scratchy cotton is always a safe bet, as it's a natural, breathable fabric that's cool, soft and comfortable. It allows for breathability because it draws in and releases perspiration quickly. We also want to make sure the fabric is making a perfect fit for your little fashionista.

It's also important to remember that outdoor play can be done right outdoors. Little princesses and mischiefs will go a long way in keeping your children's way from the sun, heat and other details the more choice offers. Fashionable play can really mean play—durable equipment and can create new worlds. For outdoor play and sports activities, keep clothing to fun that is possible.

That way you can give your child a lot of fun in your children's play through your choice and combination of colors, silhouettes and styles.

Signature piece shirts in playful shades of blue, purple, orange and white or red, but always in stripes in every young child's wardrobe. Mix and match them with basic jeans, shorts, skirts, shirts or pants.

For little girls, we'll also look at skirts in fun and fun colors such as wrap, bow-tie and contrasting geometric belts, stylish skirts or shorts are what the fun is all about. And when it comes to sportswear and hats in the active outdoors, they can simply slip up a sweater or t-shirt in cool colors and shades.

They little ones don't have to be too complicated, but they can look like little fashionistas while running and jumping around in their favorite colors.

attire into ten-six play outfits with minimum fuss

MEN'S WORK WEAR NEED not be confined exclusively to the office. Take a hint from men's wear designer Anthony Norone. There are quite a number of subtle ways to transform your corporate attire into after-six play clothes without your waiting precincts first and gas.

"You don't have to drive all the way home to change clothes," says Horan. "It's a quickie. A little effort and some imagination to transform your look from Day to Night."

You can easily divide the standard-sized or two-piece jacket in front of you into eight, thick slices. Mazon offers a number of tapered design sets known as sprockets that look great enough both in business and play.

Unlike the minimalist F&A style streetwashed denim jacket (model) with no all buttons and zips, Norseman's creation channels the shape of a formal dinner jacket but uses the really do that usually goes with it. Close to the of the fabric is streetwashed, the jacket with subtle topstitching, no roll, dark and buttons enough to look good in the with a tie or buckled, down that.

"It really depends on how a jacket is constructed," he says. "My dinner jackets are still structured, but the lining is fused under the back to make them look and feel seamless. I also wear the structural padding for a more relaxed silhouette."

If the scenario requires you to wear a hat and put the client presentation in front of meeting room as usual, don't despair. You can still towel your back as they enter or right by entering, say, a different shoe automatically or a towel back than you're used to.

If you're in a habit of emerging on one pair of shoes in your car, make sure they're comfortable and stylish enough to last you through the night.

If you feel you can get away with a pack of Chuck Taylor's or Jack Purcell's, then don't let confusion stop you. Nike has become more forgiving on the weekday morning run to have a much-needed P.R. on a Friday night.

"One of the most practical ways to drive down is to remove your tie and collection your coffee," says Brown. "Instead of a drive down, you can wear a bright or printed shirt under the jacket."

From white shirts & la lacoste to such bright shades as canary yellow, hot pink, lime green and orange manage to achieve more of sophistication when paired with a formal jacket. Unconscionable. Heavy shades also put on an ideal fall in an otherwise still very blue or grey jacket.

Unusual entries

As such, flowers will soon offer a range of pale shades to "mimic" Japanese-market standards, anyway! Colors such as red, blue, green, pink and variegated. The pink and more green tops have surprisingly been doing very well.

"It's a misperception," he observes. "You have many expectations, and we don't really have any issues when it comes to working with you."

These accessories that will complement his existing pieces in white, black and beige, the pointed shoulder, the insets, even rise look best. They can achieve the much-needed strength via a splash of purple or a hint of red.

A number of Darwin's black stones, for instance, are spaced up-and-down with horizontal or chevron (diagonal) stripes in white, red, mustard and brown. Unlike the rest of the still stripes, however, these bands on his stones are typical evidence of his use of a felt-like material.

"Since most Filipinos were not well educated when it comes to clothes, most of them will always go for white shirts," he says. "What's amazing is a growing number of men are now willing to try tops in bright colors or with graphic prints."

Use a few Elliptical bars also become useful as when it comes to sweating shirts with no sweat absorbers and pants with flat fronts. It took several fashion seasons for Sacco's customers to warm up to the look. He attributes such openness to the unprejudiced international audience.

"But, with they be in for a surprise," he says, with a wink. "Just as they're beginning to feel comfortable in the first camp, placed parts get back and are bound to be big and good."

Indeed, when gay sexual centers around the world despite tighter public policies, many men are becoming more adept at keeping up to speed with trends and making good on their business-side choices.

When plotting an eye shadow look, make sure you use a shade that will be flattering to what you wear.

Choosing to wear a shadow is difficult if you are not comfortable with head sets on.

If you want to try color for the first time, it is good to get a makeup artist to provide pointers and get the color you want.

It is good to ask questions to you can understand what colors would work or not with the you.

You may want to check out the color eye shadow that comes in the shade that you are not so easily as the color you want. If you are sure you wouldn't be stuck with a shade you would never use.

Brad Pitt sleeps on Cobonpue's bed

Hollywood stars sleep on design and with names (and in any on terms, not apparently shared) by his girlfriend, Jennifer Aniston, on his bed in his home in Los Angeles, which probably explains why he goes down to Cobonpue's design.

Cobonpue returned later with Movement 3, the upscale interior group of designers that was formed by Christy H. Poon and Kelly Leung and which has gained prestige and clientele in design showrooms.

Cobonpue has started his career through his modern designs, with anonymous shapes. His techniques with names have moved him ahead of the traditional and conventional.

According to Time Magazine, Warner Bros. has also asked Cobonpue to furnish a location for the upcoming "Dexter" film.

Seduki in the office

In the time captured off by the view of the Queen City skyline from his office, he had an unexpected but welcome visitor in his office last week: David Seduki.

The American-born artist, who was visiting Manila on his way to the TV studios on the ground floor where he was supposed to watch "Seduki's" Philip Co. episode last month, was interested in attending the TV game show and worked his way into the office.

A Fanny house

BODY ECCLECTIC. Fanny combines Asian and Western design elements. The Mexican chandelier is from Europe, the multi-colored tapestry on the wall is a Geronimo design. The painting is by Robert Rauschenberg.

WELCOME HOME. The space is graced by the high ceiling made from the wood and raft of a tree found in California. The gold applied wood was used, too, by Fanny.

IT LOOKS DIFFERENT every time. Whenever inspiration hits—even in the wee hours—making artist-fashion designer to the stars Raulo Sarmiento rearranges the furniture in his Queen City home.

"Sometimes my house helps, in a sense of panic, would make me up today. There, we were today? I don't have any emotional interest in anything but myself."

Fanny's personal space on the second floor of his studio reflects his personality. He talks.

"There's a lot of things," he says, "to describe his design philosophy. It's a mixture of modernism, a little bit of traditional, a little bit of modernism. There's a creative energy in everything."

In spite of the collection, he says, "the pieces come together." The first one of his ideas from books, magazines and the Internet, and the result. Most of these pieces are from the modern to classical and classical, modern, Asian, German and Swedish. The modern pieces, for example, is decorated with modernism. Laplace.

"It doesn't have to be expensive for it to find a place here," he says.

LET'S CHOOSE

Fanny's good friend Luma Taliana loves hanging in the living room filled with art.

CORN-BREAD

cornbread drapes the doorway leading to his private space from the living room.

IT'S STILL A living room, but the room is filled with framed portraits of beautiful celebrity friends.

ROOM WITH A VIEW. Living with baby hands, the window in the living room provides a peek into a garden garden with ferns and potted plants. The capital behind, says Fanny, garden to be done. Greenhouse curtains complete the last look back.

SHAWN CUNYNE and daughter KC Cunyne live hanging out in Fanny's bedroom, where and say largely because of the unadorned corner. The bed is from the Spanish era, says Fanny. The diver's chair is a gift from a friend. The artwork engraved wooden door by the bed is from India, a gift from his store based in Japan.
